

Mirrored Time: A Time Archivist Novel, Book 1

First it was water. Then blood. And finally smoke. Gwen Conway never knew there were so many ways to die. Honestly, it was something she would have been happy not knowing. Maybe they really are just dreams. Nightmares. But they wont stop. And dreaming of her death is getting old. Then theres the sleepwalking. Shed like to pass on that too. Gwens pretty sure the dreams have something to do with her new job - which, of course, is definitely not just a job Dont get her wrong, working for the archiver of the time streams has its perks. Having the power to travel to any past or future time is fantastic. Plus, theres Rafe, the ex-gladiator from the future. Shed like to keep him around too. Not that she would tell him that. Itd go straight to his head. But shes less-than-pleased to find herself in the middle of a time-travelers war, especially against a crazed half-god who has the power to obliterate the existence of any time or place. And the guardians, her so called allies? All the help they offer are strict rules and smug superiority. Plus, they seem convinced shes already lost - that shes already died. Gwen is starting to wonder whether she should have read her employment contract more carefully.
