

Summertime Sizzle: Secrets for Growing Hot Peppers in Containers

Summertime Sizzle Secrets for Growing Hot Peppers in Containers Are you recognized by friends and family as an aficionado of all things hot and spicy? Growing your own container bound hot peppers is easy and a rewarding experience. Popular varieties such as jalapeno and cayenne are great for container gardening and may satisfy your need for heat. If your desire is for more sizzle, the habanero pepper may be the ticket to curb that crave. I have grown all of these hot pepper plants and many more in my backyard container garden and so can you! This publication reveals the secrets on how to grow hot peppers in your own backyard container garden! Planting peppers using these container-planting techniques will help get you that bountiful harvest of fiery pepper pods. What hot pepper aficionado wouldn't want to pick their own fiesta of zesty flavors from backyard containers? Whether your goal is to enjoy pesticide free cuisine or that never-ending quest for the hottest peppers on the block, growing your own allows you to become more self-reliant and less dependent on large-scale corporate agriculture. Using available urban spaces for cultivation brings food closer to the consumer and reduces fuel and energy consumption. If you are looking for some been-there, done-that, practical know-how, for growing hot peppers, then this eBook is for you! The information in this hot pepper gardening guide provides year-around green-thumb tips for superior pepper performance. Just some of what you will find: Container selection for peppers Optimizing soil for pepper performance Fertilizing techniques for peppers Year-around tips for soil maintenance About The Author Bill Bradley has been growing various types of hot peppers for nearly 30 years. Starting from a 3rd floor balcony in the divided city of West Berlin to modern-day high-tech self-watering containers in coastal Virginia. The total acreage devoted to hot pepper production is approximately 15 square feet that resides in a number of repurposed containers and self-watering containers. The 2011 harvest provided Bill, his friends, family, and co-workers with abundant supplies of jalapeno, serrano, habanero peppers. The 2012 harvest has provided over 30 pint jars of pickled peppers for lining the pantry with more on the way. He has also preserved several jars of homemade chipotle peppers in adobo, and given his dehydrator a real workout drying hot peppers. He also makes a mean grilled and smoked chipotle pizza. He is always looking for ways to improve production and trying new innovative gardening techniques to maximize pepper production. Next years plans are to add lacto-fermented hot peppers to the harvest preservation plans.
