

Investigations of the Future

This is a new collection of seven French proto-science fiction stories devoted to explorations of the future, as imagined in the 1850s and early 1900s, translated and annotated by renowned science fiction writer and scholar Brian Stableford. This collection includes fantastic explorations of Future Paris by Theophile Gautier, Arsene Houssaye, Victor Fournel as well as Alfred Franklins visionary The Ruins of Paris in 4875 (1875), Maurice Sproncks devastating criticism of socialist utopianism, Year 330 of the Republic (1894), and Jean Julliens An Investigation of the World of the Future (1909), in which a reporter interviews scientists whose discoveries are in the process of laying the foundations for the transformation of human society.
