

Something Wicked #14 (October 2011) (Something Wicked SF & Horror Magazine)

Our Oct 2011 issue is once again packed with original fiction starting with our cover story, beautifully illustrated by Hendrik Gericke, The Treasons, by A.A. Garrison which is about a father and son road trip across a desolate land. Our novelette for this month is Jiang Shi, by William Mitchell, in which an opium trader deals with constant chronic pain by sampling his goods, until he finds another source of relief. The Watcher in The Corner is a poignant story about a being who watches a family, silently, from its corner of the ceiling. Our last story is a reprint by Davin Ireland entitled Engaging the Idrl and is about a group of soldiers securing a foreign planet. We also have our usual non-fiction pieces, firstly the insanity of Mark Sykess Sixth Sense of Humour, which this month is about the end of the world and how to avoid it, or, at the very least, make the best of it. The second piece is my pondering about our time in space and whether or not it has passed, or is only just beginning. Our feature interview this month is with Joan De La Haye, whose debut novel Shadows will fuck you up for life, but in a good way. And so, along with our usual Writers Cornered interviews, that's our issue for this month. If you want to save 45% off the cover price you can pick a subscription for only $1.66 (about R12) per month from Weightless
