

Moon Zero: A Sci-Fi Parallel Universe Adventure (The Dreamer Chronicles Book 3)

Episode III of the Dreamer Chronicles finds our two young heroes hurled into a terrifying race against time! Sarina, now 13, has a big problem, and its way bigger than the one she thinks she has. Shell have to save the world. Again. Sarina is one of Professor Harrison's most powerful Dreamer Kids: highly creative children who can communicate in their dreams with people in other universes ... and in Sarina's case, actually travel between them. The Consortium wants to get its hands on the Professor's secret invention a REM-collider that multiplies creative dream power and they want to turn it into a powerful weapon, for sale to the highest bidder. Despite her young age, Sarina is focused on teaching kids to paint. But the art programs benefactor, Sir John Drysdale, has made it clear that her art lacks emotion and something inside her is missing. Strange, seemingly unconnected occurrences provoke unrest across two worlds: severe weather patterns threaten to destroy a township; her old enemy, Makthryg, is making plans to escape his prison; in Australia, a prominent observatory has reported an unusual and worrying aberration in the Moon's orbit. And Sarina is kidnapped. When her friend, Nathan, discovers a frightening message on Professor Harrison's computer, these events conspire to trigger a destructive domino effect. One that will catapult the young adventurers on a wild journey to do battle with the cosmos itself. But for them to be successful, Sarina must fix whatever is missing inside her and confront her arch-enemy once again.
