

Pocket in the Sea (The Albion Transcripts Book 2)

In an alternate universe where the twentieth century gave rise to individuals with psychic talents, the Great War ended far differently, and the flow of history led the United States and her allies into a losing war with China by the middle of the twenty-first century. The allied submarine navies are holding back an ever more hostile enemy that is intent on winning a war of attrition. A desperate navy presses antiquated boats into service to supply the main fleet and mans them with the leavings of the navys worst sailors. For Chief Petty Officer Lucius Tagget and his best friend Aaron Fredrickson, its their ticket out of naval prison and a chance to clear their names. What should be an uneventful assignment behind the front lines turns into a nightmare after an accident that claims the lives of all the men on one of the antiquated submarines. Terrified of condemning another boat and crew to eternal patrol, the Navy assigns the CPNS Puget Sound a talented seer in hopes of preventing another accident. Instead, that decision changes the entire crew, and ultimately, the entire war.
