

The Combat Poets of Maya

The Combat Poets of Maya is about a war between a colony of artists and a colony of bureaucrats. When the bureaucrats create genetically modified soldiers to keep the artists in line, the Combat Poets rise to the occasion to defend their pursuit of their passion for writing and rhyme. The combat poets reading stage is loosely based on and inspired by poetry readings at the Satyricon in Portland, a punk rock club back in the day. The author shared the stage with poets like Walt Curtis and Marty Christianson.
