Not illustrated. 1892 Excerpt: ...similar habit of growth to General Jacqueminot, but the thorns are much less numerous, and with a more yellow hue; the flowers are also fuller and more globular, and blossom much more abundantly. A. K. Williams, Madame Alphonse Lavallee, and Wilhelm Koelle, may be grouped under this head. Duke Of Edinburgh Type.--The only English rose which is the head of a type was sent out by George Paul in 1868. The habit of growth is much like that of Jacqueminot, but the foliage is generally longer and larger. The flowers are not permanent in color, burning very quickly in the sun, and are very sparsely produced in the autumn. It is a very beautiful family when grown in a moist, cool climate; but there are few of the members that will do well under our hot sun. The varieties best known, mostly of recent origin, are: Brightness of Cheshunt, Dr. Hooker, Duke of Connaught, Duke of Teck, Robert Marnock, S. Reynolds Hole, Sultan of Zanzibar, The Shah. All of the types described above belong to the Hybrid Remontant Class of Roses. Among the Hybrid Noisettes we find two types, the first is the--Mademoiselle Bonnaire Type.--The flowers are of medium size, and of circular, very beautiful form. The growth is moderate or dwarf. The foliage is rather small and somewhat crimped; the wood light green, fortified with numerous small spines. Though devoid of fragrance, these are our most charming white roses; the flowers are freely produced throughout June and the summer months. The varieties belonging to the type are Eliza Boelle, Madame Noman, and Madame Oswald de Kerchove. Madame A. De Rougemont Type.--The varieties of this type differ greatly from those of the preceding.
