

Translight (Galactic Alliance Book 1)

While testing Earth's first stardrive, one of humanity's oldest questions is answered: We are not alone. But before Earth can benefit from the advanced technologies offered by the other cultures, it must form a united world government. Old habits are hard to break and it doesn't take long before things begin to unravel. Jay Kauffman, mathematical genius and creator of the stardrive, believed his invention would free mankind. Instead, it has made war inevitable. Translight is the first book of the Galactic Alliance series. It is a hard military science fiction space opera that has been compared to E.E. Doc Smith's famous Lensmen and Skylark series.
