

Lilac: An Anthology of Us, Introduction and Methodology

Part one of the serial digital fiction, Lilac: An Anthology of Us. The races of the known stars discovered each other through advances in science, connected through trade, and maintained a common peace through careful diplomacy. In their centuries long haste they cast old beliefs into the furnace, but one common belief found new life rising in the smoke. The poems, hymns, and epics, about an old home world called Lilac were long set in the shelf with fantasy until a common genetic bond was found between two races light years apart. Dive into this journey spanning centuries through documents, scientific articles, sermons, and stories collect by a nameless Doctoral student. Lilac: An Anthology of Us, will be published one chapter at a time. This introduction is free, but I hope it will leave you hungry for more about the world of Lilac. The chapters each represent an article collected by the nameless Doctoral student. Each one will give you a unique glance into a race's discovery of its shared heritage and how they come to terms with being alone. You don't need to buy them all or read them in order to enjoy, but I hope you'll be too excited not to. You can buy as many chapters as you're interested in, but don't need to buy them all. I will recommend some as more important to the plot, but any reader should be able to skip any chapter.
