

RaeRa Returns (The Cleansing Book 2)

RaeRa is back with another dose of tough love for the human race. The big-headed lizard, as Frank Woodard likes to call him, isn't a lizard at all. He's an alien from the planet Mon. The two first met in The Cleansing. RaeRa was sent to earth by the Monian Council on a mission to save mankind from itself. Frank was a homicide detective for the Washington, D.C. Metro Police Department. A crusty but likeable guy who had no time for niceties or political correctness. He was the last man on earth RaeRa should have chosen to help him get his message out. But Frank was chosen by default. He was the one on duty on the night the first of RaeRa's victims fell. In the days and weeks that followed one hundred new victims fell each night, all of seemingly natural causes. They had nothing in common, save a small circular bruise above their sternums. But everyone has secrets. Frank soon learned that they had something else in common as well. They all killed someone in their past. And now they were paying the price. This time around the stakes are even higher. And the victims more innocent. And once again, RaeRa seeks Frank's help. Only this time, the fate of the world is quite literally hanging in the balance.
